Evidence from the Bible

By Gordon Clason

The author says, "The evidence from the Bible describes the ancient Hebrews as being Afro-haired and Black." I must admit that I bought this book to debunk it. I have read the Bible many times and did not believe that any such evidence was in there. I was wrong. It's there, alright. I had just missed it.

I will admit that the author starts out with some sheer speculation, but he follows it up with clear evidence, quoting passage after passage that proves his point. Particularly telling are the passages in Leviticus where the priests are required to evaluate white spots for evidence of leprosy. The text goes into great detail about "bright" spots that are darkish white, somewhat dark, pale white, yellowish, etc. It is clear from the text that all of the above are anomalies, and the normal skin color is darker than "somewhat dark".

I certainly didn't remember that these passages were in there, and am not sure I would have understood their significance without the author pointing out how they dovetail with other passages. I encourage you to read it for yourself. I started out a skeptic, but this author has me convinced,

Food for Thought...

By Blue Rabbit

A most interesting read, along with photos of ancient architecture that we have failed to SEE what is there so clearly.

Definitely awakens one's curiosity to dig deeper into this subject and how, yet again, history has been conveniently "edited" by those in authority to have us believe deceptions.

The Ancient Black Hebrews and Arabs

By Muata

This is a great book in the help to destroy the myth that Egypt and the ancient world were White or Arabs and not Black Africans. If you are in search of books that put Blacks in their proper place in ancient and world history, read it.
