The stories in this collection are funny, thought-provoking, and sometimes bittersweet, but all, in their own way, a delight to

By Jim Barton

This is a collection of beautifully written short stories, full of gentle humor and warmth and told as modern-day parables. Although all the stories have a spiritual theme at heart, this is done with such light, deft paint strokes that the stories are accessible even to readers normally turned off by Christian fiction.

The book opens with the titular story, "The Fur Coat To Die For", in which a woman finds a beautiful fur coat on display that she deary wants, although she can hardly afford it. Later when she and her husband go back to store, they meet the mysterious salesman who tells them the true cost of the coat.

My favorite, "My Eulogy", is almost a bookend to "Fur Coat". And a real tearjerker. The main character goes to Bailey's, a wondrous department where almost anything can be purchased, in search of a lost toy rocket (shown on the front cover) that held special significance to him from childhood. He meets the artist with the "strange glint in his eye" who re-creates the toy rocket -- and explains to him the price that was paid.

The stories in this collection are funny, thought-provoking, and sometimes bittersweet, but all, in their own way, a delight to read.

Short Stories to Make You Think

By Wesley Underwood

This book is a compilation of fun stories that leave you thinking! The whole collection can be read in a single sitting, but I liked reading just a single story per day. Each one is unique, with a surprising twist and a lesson to be found. Topics range the gamut... starting with the feature story about a fur coat. Enjoy!

Rather Douglas Adams-esque

By dr matt

A collection of fun, short stories. A few have a twist that makes you think, a few make you wonder how in the world the author came up that, all are enjoyable.
